

28th Annual Worksite Health Awards Application Check List

Thank you for promoting worksite wellness. We're so glad that you've decided to apply for the 2022 Worksite Health Awards! You've taken great steps to make your business a healthier place to work for your employees, and you should be recognized for it.

As you complete your application, you'll need to include or describe the following:

- Your company's contact information, including the number of full-time employees
- Your company's name as it should appear in print and on your award
- All health and safety awareness programs or resources your company conducted or provided in 2021, including a health assessment (HA), health interest survey, literature promoting health and fitness activities, lifestyle educational materials, injury prevention, CPR, employee assistance program (EAP), etc.
- A list of health intervention programs your company made available to employees (for example, screenings, immunizations, PCP forms, onsite and/or online seminars, workshops, challenges, and blood drives), including descriptions, dates delivered, and percentage of employees that participated
- Electronic copies (pdfs) of supplemental program materials (for the highest award level, you must include at least three of these with your application). Examples would include:
 - Wellness policies, such as wellness mission statement, incentive plan, smoking policy, etc.
 - Available outcome reports (for example, an aggregate satisfaction report or aggregate health risk report)
- Workplace success stories about adapting to a new work environment. This year we will recognize and award companies that took special steps to help employees manage stress, build resilience, and protect their emotional well-being during a transitional year.
